CALENDAR OF WOMEN COMPOSERS

In relation to the Didactic Guide "How to normalize the legacy of women composers in cultural spaces and all educational levels" (<https://www.mujeresenlamusica.es/recursos/>), this Calendar of Women Composers arises as a resource to bring the knowledge of women composers born and died almost every day of the year, and especially, to continue facilitating the programming of activities in relation to their tribute for centenaries, 50, 25 or other groupings of years, at classroom level or professional performance practice. It works through a format that is different from the sources and precedents from which it is based: a format that allows it to be printed in each classroom and displayed on its walls, month by month, or successively, page by page every ten days, grouping all the sheets that make it up, permanently in both cases.

The web references given are general in most cases, and where they don't exist, somewhat more specific, such as those related to CDs. In all cases, they are an approach as it is said, and therefore, are proposed several extension activities, in what may be the development of an even more complete and illustrated calendar, or partial extensions of information in other ways depending on the interest, by the students with the guidance of teachers, and also performers.

This Calendar of Women Composers starts from the Chronological Axis of Women Composers elaborated by Musicalics (www.musicalics.com). In the searches that you make in this reference, you will also find key women in relation to composition even if they were not composers: protectors of the arts, literary women, etc. Donne, Women in Music has a Calendar with expanded information on each female composer on each day of the year, which is recommended consulting as a second source of expanded information (<https://donne365.blogspot.com/>, <http://www.drama-musica.com/TheBigList2.html>). Below are offered activities and, as an example, women composers found in the different sources or references, as an added recommendation to the references already included in the Didactic Guide "How to normalize the legacy of Women Composers in cultural spaces and all educational levels".

2. With the support of the information obtained in the calendar, or with that of the catalogs and references given in the Didactic Guide "How to normalize the legacy of Women Composers in cultural spaces and all educational levels", acquire scores, perform them in auditions, disseminate such activities as oriented in the guide, etc.

3. Listen to versions of works composed by female composers, place them in their stylistic period, read about their context and present them in class, etc.

4. Adapt/transcribe original works by women composers to different instrumentalities, perform them in auditions, disseminate such activities as outlined in the Didactic Guide "How to normalize the legacy of Women Composers in cultural spaces and all educational levels" as a support, etc.

5. Familiarize yourself with different publishing houses and informative portals about women composers (use as support the Didactic Guide "How to normalize the legacy of women composers in cultural spaces and all educational levels").

6. Search for images of the women composers and make portraits in b/w, color, with different techniques, with the possibility of adding them to a calendar of your own elaboration, exhibiting them in class, making traveling exhibitions, etc.

7. Elaborate a collective calendar among classmates with the illustrations of the composers, design elaborated with the personality of their authors, share it, exhibit it in class, spread it...
